Mission:

"To effectively communicate to the public relevant information concerning municipal and related governmental and community services."

Houston Television (HTV) began operations in 1986 as The Municipal Channel (MUN) and is the cable communications division of the Mayor's Office. It was initially charged with the task of covering Houston City Council meetings via closed circuit television. In 2007, The Municipal Channel re-branded its operation as Houston Television (HTV). HTV is one of four Public, Education and Government (PEG) access channels in the Houston area and is carried out locally by cable providers.
