Mission:

Legal services for city-county officials and agencies
The Office of Corporation Counsel provides legal services internally to city-county agencies and departments. It helps clients make decisions in the best interests of the residents and taxpayers of Indianapolis.

The office has three divisions:

- City prosecutors, who take legal action when there are violations of the city-county municipal code
- Counseling, which advises city-county officials, agencies, departments, boards, and commissions in legal matters
- Litigation, which defends city-county officials, agencies, departments, boards, and commissions in court cases.
