Mission:

With more than 600 employees under its Solid Waste division, the Phoenix Public Works Department provides trash, recycling, and other waste diversion services to more than 420,000 households. Public Works Solid Waste oversees two transfer stations, two materials recovery facilities, one compost facility, five closed landfills and one active landfill. Public Works' other divisions oversee and maintain all City fleet vehicles and City buildings.

The department's work culture is focused on providing excellent customer service and continuously striving for operational efficiency. Public Works is committed to reaching zero waste by 2050 by offering recycling and zero waste education, developing convenient and reliable waste diversion programs, and collaborating with organizations and businesses to develop a robust circular economy.
