The Fortress/Palace of Santa Catalina was the first fortification built to defend the city of San Juan and the first in a series of military forts, which include Castillo San Felipe del Morro, Fort San Cristóbal, and Fortín de San Gerónimo. Construction was authorized by King Charles I of Spain as a protective measure against attacks by Indians, corsairs, and pirates. Construction began in 1533 and was completed on May 25, 1540. Since the 16th century, La Fortaleza has served as the official residence of the governor, making it the most continuously used executive mansion in the Americas. The mansion was extensively remodeled in 1846 by the Spanish authorities to adapt its military origins to its new purely administrative function. Approximately 170 governors have occupied the mansion, and it has received hundreds of dignitaries, including U.S. President John F. Kennedy and his wife, First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy, who visited it in 1961. Their Majesties King Juan Carlos I of Spain and Queen Sofia of Greece in 1987, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands, Prime Minister Baroness Margaret Thatcher of the United Kingdom, President Barack Obama of the United States in 2011, Their Majesties King Felipe VI of Spain and Queen Letizia of Spain in 2016, among other politicians, heads of state and members of the royal family.
