Mission:

The Institute of Puerto Rican Culture (ICP) has the mission to research, preserve, promote, and disseminate Puerto Rican culture in all its diversity and complexity. Through the memory and promise of culture, the diverse levels, sectors, ages, and interests of the community create the collection of lifestyles, customs, and artistic expressions that identify us as a country. The ICP exists to preserve and disseminate this knowledge, share our talent internationally, and enrich the love of our own.

Our traditions are not rigid museum objects, but living activities in constant renewal and reappropriation, as new traditions develop. Respect for diversity, for hybridity, for what is appropriated, and for what is rethought are also essential parts of this institution, which actively seeks the collaboration of all in a task that must always be shared hand in hand with its vast diversity.
