Mission:

We conduct independent analyses of City programs and services with an equity and social justice perspective, making recommendations on ways the City can better serve the people of Seattle.

We're housed in the legislative branch of City government and we primarily conduct performance audits on the activities of executive branch departments; this structure helps maintain our independence. We serve the public interest by providing the City Council, the Mayor, City departments, and the public with accurate information, objective analysis, and useful recommendations on how best to use public resources in support of the well-being of the residents of Seattle. We follow up annually on the status of our recommendations that have not yet been implemented here using our Recommendations Dashboard.
